Big Ideas & Major Themes

Here's some information relating to your program to review with your students before visiting the museum.

- American art encompasses a wide variety of styles and objects. They all tell a story about America and what its citizens valued at the time.
- Art is impacted by innovations in technology and can also address those developments (in either a positive or negative light).

In the Classroom

Prepare students for your visit with one or more of these activities.

- Have students look at images (photographs, paintings, or objects) from various periods of American history and ask them to put them in order. Discuss what elements give them clues about the dates of the images.
- As a class, have students analyze a political cartoon from the era they're studying. Discuss how symbols and metaphors are used to convey ideas.
- Have students create posters depicting the era of history they're studying (e.g. war bonds posters during WWII, advertisements to move West in the 19th century, WPA posters during the Depression). Look at examples for reference, noting how elements like color are used purposefully.
- Examine examples of landscape from various regions of the U.S. and ask students to compare them. Relate them to time period, and include vocabulary such as urban, rural, and suburban.
